

A Painter's Paradise

Painter Ernest Demke of Salt Lake City, see arrow, must feel that his trade also requires special agility as he maneuvers his boatswains' chair around the main spire of the Brigham City Tabernacle, Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. Chipping the old paint off as he goes he will later whiten the other spires. He has had some unusual jobs, but this is "my most difficult," he says.